ARTICLE IV. DEFINITIONS

Section 1. Open Educational Resources (OER)

A. Open Educational Resources are high-quality teaching, learning, and research materials that reside in the public domain or have been released under an intellectual property license that permits their free use and repurposing by others. OER include full courses, course materials, modules, textbooks, streaming videos, tests, software, and any other tools, materials, or techniques used to support access to knowledge. (Source: William and Flora Hewlett Foundation)
B. All OER must meet Web Content Accessibility Guide (WCAG) standards and comply with the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA).
Section 2. Zero Textbook Cost (ZTC)

A. [Definition needed]

Section 3. Open Access “Open” in Open Access, Open Content, Open Educational Resources, and Open Data

A. Open Access is the free, immediate, online availability of research articles combined with the rights to use these articles fully in the digital environment. Open Access is the open movement’s response to restrictive and expensive academic journal subscriptions. An Open Access journal has an open license, which means the information can be freely used and shared.

B. The terms “open content” and “Open Educational Resources” describe any copyrightable work (traditionally excluding software, which is described by other terms like “open source”) that is licensed in a manner that provides users with free and perpetual permission to engage in the 5R activities:
   a. retain — the right to make, own, and control copies of the content (e.g., download, duplicate, store, and manage)
   b. reuse — the right to use the content in a wide range of ways (e.g., in a class, in a study group, on a website, in a video)
   c. revise — the right to adapt, adjust, modify, or alter the content itself (e.g., translate the content into another language)
   d. remix — the right to combine the original or revised content with other material to create something new (e.g., incorporate the content into a mashup)
   e. redistribute — the right to share copies of the original content, your revisions, or your remixes with others (e.g., give a copy of the content to a friend)

C. Open Data are research data that are freely available on the internet permitting any user to download, copy, analyze, re-process, pass to software or use for any other purpose without financial, legal, or technical barriers other than those inseparable from gaining access to the internet itself. - LA

Appendix B

In several of the recently published QFEs I have read, a general introduction that includes the intended outcomes and the anticipated impact on student learning/achievement precedes descriptions of the several projects and project timelines themselves. In the following draft, in addition to the OER project description/narrative, I’ve included the hoped-for outcomes and impacts of the project; if our QFE also will have a general introduction, then these outcomes and incomes could be incorporated there, and of course I am happy to help with this portion of the essay once others begin writing it. (BTW, special thanks to Alice, who helped me tremendously with the matrix and shared some observations that I shamelessly lifted nearly verbatim and plugged in below.) —MG

Project Description: OER

Rio Hondo College will continue recent, RHC Academic Senate- and student government-endorsed efforts to increase faculty adoption/creation of and student access to high-quality, low- or no-cost open educational resources (OER) to reduce the cost of textbooks and instructional materials. Driven by Rio Hondo’s OER Committee, the College’s 2020–21, CARES Act-funded initiative to expand and increase OER utilization via stipends awarded to faculty adopters will serve as a foundation to these efforts, as the project will seek to continue and expand upon activities first undertaken as part of this action.

Keeping in mind the ways in which reducing or eliminating costs associated with commercial textbooks and instructional materials can help bring down barriers to student enrollment, access, and success—and the potential OER have to represent more focused, topical, local, and/or culturally relevant material that aligns with the Rio Hondo’s mission and values—activities will include communicating to current and potential students via the College schedule and the bookstore those course sections that utilize OER; investing in marketing and outreach to current and potential students that takes up low- or zero-cost programs; and ensuring quality and appropriateness of OER (as is done for commercial textbooks and instructional materials). The College will also seek to increase department-level adoptions, and to institutionalize processes by which awareness about and the adoption/creation of OER is encouraged and supported. To these ends, efforts will include selecting OER as a core professional development theme for the campus, and offering ongoing, OER-related professional development; training RHC librarians to support faculty in the discovery and/or adoption/creation of OER; updating the curriculum process to include OER; implementing OER as a way to support enrollment management; and providing District funds and resources to support OER institutionalization as needed.

While, again, the main or immediate “point” of OER is—as the College Textbook Affordability Act of 2015 (AB 798, Bonilla) has it—“to reduce costs for college students,” given the high percentage of RHC students who live at or below the poverty level, the intended impacts of the activities that comprise the OER project are to increase access, and the likelihood of success and achievement, by telegraphing to current and potential students low- or no-cost options to join course sections and programs that utilize OER. (The idea is if instructional materials costs are obviated by OER, students needn’t worry about how they will afford to join a given course; they are therefore less likely to drop out and more likely to complete, and this change has the potential to increase FTEs.) Measuring the efficacy of project efforts will perform include help from the Offices of Instructional Research and Planning with information provided by Instructional Operations (i.e. Scheduling) and counselors, and student surveys and focus groups.

Responsible Parties: Bookstore and Office of Marketing and Communications, Department of Instructional Operations in collaboration with the Office of Instructional Research and Planning, Staff Development, OER, and Curriculum Committees; VPAA and academic deans.

Project Outcomes: OER

The proposed OER project is intended to achieve these outcomes:

- Institutionalize OER via (a) District-funded, campus-wide professional development; (b) a modification of the curriculum process to include OER; and (c) the incorporation or implementation of OER to support enrollment management. The College will consider this outcome successful if [x] of professional development activities are offered to at least [x] participants in Fall 2021 and Spring 2022, and if by Fall 2022 OER has become part of the curriculum process and RHC’s enrollment management plan.

- From Fall 2023 until the conclusion of the Spring 2024 semester, ensure department-level OER adoption by seeking an [x%] increase in the number of faculty engaged with developing and using OER, (b) an [x%] increase in the number of CRNs that utilize OER materials, and (c) an [x%] increase in the number of unit and program plans and program reviews identifying increased OER offerings as a goal.

- Improve student access and success through the provision of OER—and by communicating to students via the bookstore and schedule which courses and programs have low- and no-cost materials—measured by the percentage of students enrolling and completing OER sections (to be determined via survey) and decreasing overall cost to students to complete a course or program (to be determined by comparing pre- to post-OER material costs in select courses/programs).

Impact on Student Learning/Achievement: OER

Rio Hondo College expects that increasing the number of course sections and programs that utilize OER—and increasing potential and current student awareness about what OER is and which sections and programs utilize low- and no-cost OER—will increase enrollment, retention, and completion of those low-income students for whom instructional materials are cost-prohibitive.
